About this booklet

This is information from n-compass about Independent Mental Health Advocacy.

Independent Mental Health Advocacy is when someone helps people:

- Understand their rights - rights say how people should be treated and what they should be able to do by law.

- Speak up about their mental health care.

The person who does this is called an Independent Mental Health Advocate (IMHA).

Sometimes, people getting care for their mental health are kept in hospital.

There are rules about how people should be treated in hospital.

This booklet will tell you:

- More about Independent Mental Health Advocacy.

- What the law says about people being treated in a hospital, who may need support from an Independent Mental Health Advocate.

What is Mental Health Advocacy?

You can get support from an Independent Mental Health Advocate (IMHA) if you are detained or being treated under a part of the Mental Health Act.

Detained means you are kept in a hospital or other building and you cannot decide to leave by yourself.

The Mental Health Act is a law. We will explain more about this in the next part.

An IMHA can support you if:

- You do not understand what is happening to you.

- You want to try and change a decision about your care or support.

IMHAs can help:

- Patients who are being kept in hospital.

- People who are on a Community Treatment Order - this means you can be treated in the local area where you live.

- People who are under Guardianship - this means that someone called a Guardian is making sure you get the care you need.

Your Guardian can be someone from your local council or another person chosen by your council.

People can also get support from an IMHA if:

- They might get some treatment that needs 2 doctors to agree to it - called Section 57 treatment.

- They are a child under the age of 18 who might need Electroconvulsive Therapy - this is when electricity is used to treat someone.

What is the Mental Health Act?

The Mental Health Act is a law that tells people with a mental health problem:

- What their rights are.

- How they can be treated.

The Mental Health Act gives doctors the power to detain you so you can get treatment.

It is important that you know what happens when you are detained and how you can get support.

The Mental Health Act has different parts called Sections.

These Sections say the different ways that people can be detained.

Different Sections have different rules about how you can be detained.

What does 'being sectioned' mean?

Being sectioned means doctors have decided you need to be kept in hospital.

You might be sectioned even if you do not want to be.

It is called 'being sectioned' because it follows the rules in sections of the Mental Health Act.

You have different rights depending on which section you are detained under.

What is a Community Treatment Order?

A Community Treatment Order allows someone who has been sectioned to:

- Stop being detained.

- Leave hospital.

- Live in their local area.

What is Guardianship?

Guardianship is a way of helping you to live in your local area.

The person or organisation who helps you with this is called a Guardian.

You will have a Guardian which could be:

- Your local council.

- Someone your local council has agreed can be your Guardian.

Your Guardian can decide things for you, like where you live.

You can still leave where you live and do things in your local area if you have a Guardianship.

What do Independent Mental Health Advocates (IMHAs) do?

An IMHA can support you to:

- Take part in planning your care.

- Get ready for and understand:
 - Mental Health Reviews - these are when health professionals look at your mental health.

- Tribunals - these are when professionals decide if you can leave hospital.

- Get other support or help to use other services, like getting a house or finding a job.

An IMHA can support you to:

- Talk about any care you might need after being detained.

- Understand how you can tell someone if you are not happy about your care.

- Understand your rights and how to use them.

An IMHA will:

- Listen to what you tell them about your ideas and feelings.

- Support you to speak up.

- Speak up for you if you need them to.

- Make sure you take part in any decisions that are made about you.

How can I get support from an IMHA?

Health professionals should tell patients and their families about IMHA services.

Health and care professionals usually tell the IMHA service if they think a patient needs their services.

n-compass will allow patients or their families to ask for support from an IMHA.
